Introduction Letter from BJA

James H. Burch, II
Acting Director
Bureau of Justice Assistance,
Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice

May 2011

Dear Colleague,

I am very pleased to provide the FY 2011 Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) Tribal Training and Technical Assistance Provider Calendar. The calendar is a resource to all interested in obtaining free training and technical assistance relating to tribal justice issues. This calendar was created to assist tribal justice professionals in identifying, collaborating, building, and enhancing partnerships.

BJA is committed to providing the tools, information, resources, training, and technical assistance to support the planning, development, and enhancement of tribal justice systems. BJA has partnered with tribal and other organizations with demonstrated experience implementing programs in tribal communities to deliver training and provide technical assistance on a variety of subjects throughout the year.

I want to emphasize that all of the training events included in this guide are provided at no cost to you. If you are a current BJA grantee, grant funds can be used to cover travel and lodging expenses for BJA-sponsored training events. If you are not a grantee, there are limited scholarships available to cover the logistical costs. To learn more about scholarship opportunities for a particular training; contact the technical assistance provider that is managing the training, as listed in this guide.

I encourage you to take part in many of the wonderful training and technical assistance opportunities available through the Bureau of Justice Assistance in FY 2011.

Sincerely,

BJA Mission

BJA's mission is to provide policy leadership and assistance in support of local criminal justice strategies to achieve safe communities. One of BJA's most important functions is to support the work of practitioners in state, local, and tribal justice systems through training and technical assistance (TTA) programs. BJA-sponsored TTA provides direct assistance to develop and implement comprehensive, system wide strategies for public safety and improving criminal justice systems.

Overview

BJA is committed to preventing and controlling crime, violence, and substance abuse and improving the functioning of criminal justice systems in American Indian and Alaska Native communities. BJA works with tribes providing leadership, management skills, and quality services in grant administration and policy development, and coordinates with other U.S. Department of Justice components and other agencies and organizations to ensure that limited federal funds are used to achieve the maximum possible benefit. At BJA, we are committed to

- working collaboratively with American Indian and Alaska Native officials to build safer, better, and more caring communities.
- partnering with tribal officials to develop, implement, and enhance justice systems that reflect community values, needs, and expectations.
- fostering communication and developing viable partnerships among tribal, federal, state, and local units of government to coordinate and resolve jurisdictional issues, which is necessary for the effective administration of justice.
- enhancing the technological capacity of tribal information systems to share justice-related information with offices and agencies internal and external to the jurisdiction.
- providing assistance to plan/construct correctional facilities on tribal lands for the incarceration of offenders subject to tribal jurisdiction.

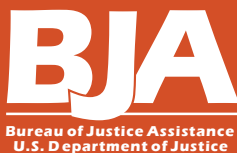

Tribal Justice Programs

BJA administers three tribal justice programs. Eligible applicants under the following programs are limited to federally recognized tribal governments, including Alaska Native villages and corporations, and authorized tribal consortia.

Correctional Systems and Correctional Alternatives on Tribal Lands Program

The Correctional Systems and Correctional Alternatives on Tribal Lands Program is designed to assist tribes with the

- identification of justice system needs and the planning process for renovating and constructing correctional facilities, multi-purpose justice centers, or correctional alternative facilities.
- renovation and construction of correctional facilities, multi-purpose justice centers, or correctional alternative facilities.
- development, implementation, or enhancement of community-based correctional alternatives to address the incarceration and rehabilitation of juvenile and adult offenders subject to tribal jurisdiction.

“Community-based correctional alternatives” refers to initiatives or programs which address offender needs outside of an institutional setting. Community-based correctional alternatives may include diversion programs, substance abuse and mental health treatment programs, holdover/sobriety centers, and problem-solving strategies.

The CSCATL TTA program is authorized under the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Title II, Subtitle A, Public Law 103-322, 105 Stat. 1796, as amended, 42 U.S.C. 13701 et seq. The Tribal Law and Order Act (TLOA) of 2009 amends Section 20109 of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (42 U.S.C. 13709) by expanding the scope of the Correctional Facilities on Tribal Lands (CFTL) Program.

Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program

The Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program (IASAP) provides funding and technical assistance to federally recognized tribal governments to plan, implement, or enhance tribal justice strategies to address crime issues related to alcohol and substance abuse.

Tribal Courts Assistance Program

The Tribal Courts Assistance Program (TCAP) is one of the U.S. Department of Justice’s primary initiatives for providing court-related support to tribal justice systems. Initially authorized under the Indian Tribal Justice Technical and Legal Assistance Act of 2000 (25 U.S.C. § 3681), the program is sponsored through the Department’s Indian Country Law Enforcement Initiative, which provides federally recognized American Indian and Alaska Native communities with resources (funding, technical assistance, etc.) to develop, implement, enhance, and continue the operation of tribal judicial systems. This flexible funding resource for tribal courts enables tribal courts to plan, implement, and enhance court services and programs that meet the unique needs of their respective communities.

American Probation and Parole Association

About APPA

The American Probation and Parole Association (APPA) is an international association composed of members from the United States, Canada and other countries actively involved with probation, parole and community-based corrections, in both adult and juvenile sectors. The association represents a voice for the field of community corrections whose mission is to serve, challenge and empower its members and constituents by educating, communicating and training; advocating and influencing; acting as a resource and conduit for information, ideas and support; developing standards and models; and collaborating with other disciplines. APPA is committed to improving probation and parole practices at all levels by fostering the development of necessary knowledge, skills, resources and legislation for the most effective and realistic probation, parole and community-based correctional programming.

To realize this commitment, APPA provides membership opportunities, training opportunities, and resources for professionals to stay abreast of the newest practices and innovations in community corrections. APPA develops a variety of resources each year, including publications, bulletins, audio-teleconferences, guidebooks, etc., related to community corrections that are available on its website www.appa-net.org.

Services Provided

The American Probation and Parole Association is an affiliate organization of the Council of State Governments (CSG). Among its many federally-funded projects, CSG/APPA has been awarded several projects funded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) and the Office of Violence Against Women (OVW) designed to develop publications and resources and deliver training and technical assistance to assist tribal justice agencies and personnel in enhancing community supervision (e.g., probation) strategies, developing effective correctional options as part of their reentry initiatives, and enhancing detention policy and practice. APPA's projects focused on tribal justice issues include:

Tribal Correctional Options Training and Technical Assistance Project (funded by BJA). The goal of this project is to improve the capacity of tribal jurisdictions in developing effective correctional options as part of their reentry initiatives. Free technical assistance is currently available for any tribe interested in receiving assistance to help identify, develop, and/or enhance the use of correctional options (such as probation programs, day reporting centers, elder panels, transitional housing, etc.) in their community.

Intermediate Training on Effective Case Management Practices for Tribal Probation Personnel (funded by BJA). The purpose of this project is to enhance the capacity for and further develop the workforce of tribal justice personnel working with alcohol/substance abusing offenders under community supervision. The primary service provided under this project will be intermediate training for tribal probation officers on three evidence-based practice topics; assessment practices, motivational interviewing, and the Family Support Approach for Community Supervision.

Development of Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) Related Products for Indian Country (funded by BJA). The goal of this project is to develop policy relevant documents, a training curriculum, and other technical assistance resources to assist tribal detention agencies and staff in preventing and responding to corrections-based sexual abuse in accordance with the provisions of the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) of 2003. This project provides needed policy guidance on complying with the provisions of PREA to detention facility administrators, as well as training programs for line staff on practical strategies for addressing sexual abuse within detention settings.

Protecting Victims through Community Supervision of Intimate Partner Abusers (funded by OVW). A primary goal of this project is to develop and deliver targeted training and technical assistance to tribal probation professionals on supervising domestic violence offenders in the community. Through this initiative, APPA will develop guidelines for tribal probation, tribal court officials, and allied professionals on the supervision of intimate partner abusers, and will deliver accompanying training to tribal probation officers on the dynamics of domestic violence and specific supervision strategies that can be used to enhance offender accountability in cases involving domestic violence.

Other Services Provided

APPA is pleased to announce the new Tribal Issues Committee which will provide a forum for tribal, county, state, and federal community corrections personnel to address issues facing Indian Country, work together to identify ways to address those issues, and share ideas with other community corrections professionals and decision makers. This committee will meet at each APPA Training Institute as well as through web-based meetings or teleconferences throughout the year.

Target Audience

Tribal probation officers, tribal court judges, tribal correctional staff, and other tribal court personnel involved in the community supervision of defendants and probationers.

Center for Court Innovation

About CCI

The Center for Court Innovation is a non-profit think tank dedicated to justice system reform. Since 1993, the Center has helped design and implement strategies for improving the performance of justice systems nationally and internationally. The Center currently operates more than a dozen demonstration projects, each of which is experimenting with new solutions to difficult problems like addiction, mental illness, delinquency, domestic violence, and community disorder. What unites all of these projects is an underlying philosophy known as problem-solving justice. This is the idea that the justice system should do more than simply process cases, it should actively seek to address the problems that bring people to court.

The Center's Tribal Justice Exchange provides technical assistance to tribal communities seeking to develop or enhance their tribal court systems. Funded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance's Tribal Courts Assistance Program, the Tribal Justice Exchange has three major goals

- Ensuring that tribal communities have access to training and ongoing technical assistance about problem-solving community-based practices.
- Encouraging formal collaborations between traditional tribal justice systems and state and local court systems.
- Identifying and disseminating best practices developed in Indian Country that could help strengthen public safety initiatives elsewhere in the United States.

The Tribal Justice Exchange offers a range of services designed to meet these goals.

Services Provided

Technical Assistance Site Visits

The Tribal Justice Exchange provides onsite needs assessments to assist tribal communities in developing community-based problem-solving strategies to meet local needs. Program staff work directly with tribal representatives to help identify the tribe's concerns and assist in the creation of a plan for addressing those concerns in a way that builds upon local resources, strengths, and traditions.

Demonstration Projects

Through the Tribal Justice Exchange, tribes are able to visit the Center's demonstration projects in the New York City area, including the award-winning Red Hook Community Justice Center and the Midtown Community Court. Each of the Center's demonstration projects is a real world experiment that offers visitors the opportunity to see problem-solving justice in action. For more information about the Center's demonstration projects, visit the Center's website, www.courtinnovation.org/tribal.

Information Sharing

The Tribal Justice Exchange is committed to promoting communication and information sharing among tribal and non-tribal justice systems. Program staff will work with tribal justice experts from across the country to produce a series of briefing papers addressing timely issues in tribal justice, including strategies for incorporating traditional tribal justice practices into state justice systems. These papers will be available free of charge on the Center for Court Innovation website.

Target Audience

The Tribal Justice Exchange is available to provide individualized technical assistance to tribal communities throughout the United States. Technical assistance is not limited to tribes that have been awarded federal grants. The Tribal Justice Exchange works with justice system professionals and those whose work intersects with the justice system. This includes judges, court staff, prosecutors, defense attorneys, court advocates, law enforcement, probation, parole, and pretrial services, as well as substance abuse treatment providers, victim services, job training programs, education institutions, and more.

Fox Valley Technical College

About FVTC

Fox Valley Technical College (FVTC) is one of the leading national trainers and educators in law enforcement today. Through its criminal justice centers and programs it has been delivering best-practice training and technical assistance since 1983. To better serve its customers including law enforcement, corrections and courts, FVTC recently reorganized these programs and centers of the college and structured them within the new National Criminal Justice Training Center (NCJTC). The programs implemented through NCJTC encompass federally funded training and technical assistance programs and services, contract and cost recovery training.

Each operation within NCJTC specializes in a particular set of issues critical to the criminal justice field. The training and technical assistance programs are dedicated to improving the knowledge, skills, capability, capacity, and leadership potential of our nation's criminal justice professionals and systems.

About CJCI

The Criminal Justice Center for Innovation (CJCI) began in 1999 with the goal of using innovation to change how communities approach the development and enhancement of justice systems.

Services Provided

The cornerstone of CJCI's philosophy is reliance on community partnerships to develop strategies targeted to meet community challenges and needs. CJCI conducts trainings that help the criminal justice community analyze needs, identify gaps and assets, and create community-based solutions that ensure ownership, pride, and sustainability.

CJCI's earliest projects remain the cornerstone of the Center's work, including development of regional and national multi-jurisdictional and multi-disciplinary law enforcement training, courthouse safety and security, as well as community analysis as a precursor to effective justice system planning strategies. CJCI takes pride in its close ties to the law enforcement community which enable Center staff to develop, promote, and deliver high-quality training and technical assistance programs that address today's diverse and challenging issues.

- Selling and Sustaining Your Program: Successful Grant Writing
- Tribal Faculty Development
- Tribal Probation Academy (TPA)

Target Audience

Conference training events focus on multi-disciplinary and multi-jurisdictional problem-solving approaches to address crime, violence, and substance abuse. Participants represent tribal and non-tribal law enforcement, social services, courts, government, probation, corrections, parole, treatment, and victim services. Training events include a wide range of topics that promote the exchange of information and networking by using a team-building process to address specific problems and assist in grant implementation.

Institute for Native Justice

About INJ

In 2005, the American Indian Resource Center, Inc. (AIRC) created the Institute for Native Justice (INJ) in response to indicators that rural and tribal communities contend with issues of interpersonal and community violence on a daily basis. AIRC worked with non-profits serving Native American youth in northeastern Oklahoma as part of the Compassion Capital Fund by providing capacity building training and technical assistance; the project was called the Youth Empowerment Solutions Project (Y.E.S. Project). One purpose of the Y.E.S. Project was to identify issues of Native American youth in rural communities; the resulting needs assessment determined that youth have considerable experience with interpersonal and community violence.

During this period, Amnesty International released the report entitled Maze of Injustice: The Failure to Protect Indigenous Women from Sexual Violence in the USA. This report validated earlier reports from the Department of Justice indicating that Native American populations experience violent assault at a rate more than twice that of other races. INJ moved forward with T/TA services, programs design and capacity building work to become a part of the solution by building and improving the response of tribal judges, victim advocates, law enforcement, court personnel, and tribal and rural community based services.

It is for these reasons that the Institute for Native Justice was created to confront and address the inequities of the justice system towards victims of crime with an emphasis on victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking and dating violence.

Services Provided

The Institute for Native Justice is a partner with the BJA T/TA providers, undertaking the Tribal Response and Court Enhancement Strategies (TRACES) project. The project focuses on tribal court systems to develop capacity building, provide on-site training and technical assistance, training opportunities for court personnel, workshops, and collaborative team building.

Target Audience

The Institute's target audience is tribal judges, prosecutors, victim advocates, court personnel, and all others working within the Tribal criminal justice system who are seeking to improve the journey to justice of victims of violent crime.

Training and Technical Assistance Events

The Institute offers on-site workshops for tribal courts, victim services, program management, law enforcement and technology. Please see our website www.institutefornativejustice.com for a complete listing of trainings and technical assistance offered. Upcoming training conferences for tribal grantees are planned for the fall of 2011 and 2012; location and dates to be announced.

Justice Solutions Group

About JSG

Justice Solutions Group (JSG) is a nationally recognized juvenile and criminal justice consulting firm. JSG provides a comprehensive array of services including: justice system and facility needs assessments; master plan development; architectural space programming; facility concept design; staffing analysis; program design; scenario development; policies and procedures; post orders; and transition and operational planning services. JSG members have successfully completed numerous criminal and juvenile justice projects for federal, state and local agencies and institutions throughout the United States. JSG members have worked with over fifty Native American Tribes and Alaska Native Villages to develop new adult and juvenile facilities and justice centers.

Services Provided

JSG has a management team, organizational structure and national service delivery system in place to provide timely, comprehensive and expert services to tribal grantees that are planning, renovating or developing new detention and/or correctional facilities under BJA's Construction of Correctional Facilities on Tribal Lands (CCFTL) grant program. JSG provides an array of training and technical assistance services to tribes, on an as-needed basis, throughout the facility development process from project initiation through planning, design, bidding, construction, and ultimate activation. Selected services include:

Technical Assistance (TA)

A JSG "Team" is assigned to work directly and continuously with tribes throughout their projects. The JSG Team communicates with all tribal project teams and tribal leadership; responds to requests for TA and/or training; keeps current on the status of each project; and assigns "Specialists," as necessary, to address specific TA needs (e.g. engineering; security; cost analysis; NEPA) and achieve results. Each JSG Team collaborates closely with their assigned tribes to ensure that the proper experts are assigned and training and TA services are delivered in a timely and appropriate manner. TA may include developing and delivering targeted workshops; instructional materials; technical guides and/or publications; and on-site and off-site TA to tribal grantees, including long distance learning by webinar and conference call.

Training by Developing and Delivering Targeted Workshops

JSG has developed and delivered specialized workshops on facility planning, design and construction. Additional workshops may be offered to provide tribal grantees with the knowledge, skills, and methodologies they need to develop effectively functioning justice systems. When appropriate, JSG also arranges and facilitates site visits to model Indian Country justice facilities.

Long Distance Learning

JSG provides distance learning through webinars and a monthly call-in telephone conference to answer grantee questions, share learning and allow grantees to network with each other.

Publications

The JSG Team, in consultation with BJA, develops and disseminates publications and guides that contain relevant information about community justice and facility planning, design and construction. This has resulted in the development and publication of 13 resource guides entitled A Series of Guides for Planning, Designing and Constructing Adult and Juvenile Correctional and Detention Facilities on Tribal Lands. These Guides are available at www.justicesolutions-group.com/publications.html.

Logistical Support for OJP/BJA Events

JSG provides support for and presents at numerous BJA-sponsored multi-tribal events focusing on planning, renovating and constructing correctional facilities on tribal lands.

Targeted Specialized Technical Assistance to BJA Grantees

JSG can make accessible to tribal grantees, throughout the duration of their grants, a cadre of specialists that can address particular questions in specific technical areas (e.g. engineering; security; cost analysis; NEPA).

PACIFIC Advisory Committee

A key resource in JSG's organizational structure is the PACIFIC Advisory Committee, which is comprised of leadership members from tribal governments, tribal correctional agencies, representatives from JSG, BJA, BIA, NIC, SAMHSA, HUD, private foundations and others. JSG facilitates the meetings and activities of the PACIFIC Advisory Committee. The Committee may review and comment on relevant materials, provide input on curricula, and offer general advice on broad policy matters.

Target Audience

JSG's primary target audience is federally recognized Native American and Alaskan Native tribes ("Tribes") that have received grant funding through BJA's Construction of Correctional Facilities on Tribal Lands grant program. JSG's secondary audience is all federally recognized tribes throughout the United States that request assistance from the BJA in connection with the planning or development of detention and/or correctional facilities on tribal lands.

National Center for Rural Law Enforcement

About NCRLE

The Tribal Justice Information Sharing System is a project designed to provide training and technical assistance resources to Tribal law enforcement and other Tribal criminal justice practitioners nationwide. Technical assistance is available on-line from our existing web site www.tjiss.net or by calling our toll free help desk at 1-877-47-TJISS (85477). A Crime Data Collection and Reporting video tutorial and an electronic manual for training purposes are also available from the project web site. The tutorial and video provide Tribal law enforcement personnel with tools to assist them in learning to collect and report their crime data by use of UCR or NIBRS. Technical assistance available upon request includes the following:

Services Provided

- Model policies and procedures
- Job descriptions
- Mutual aid agreements
- Work schedules
- Agency technology self assessment work sheets
- Tribal justice information sharing training and technical assistance needs assessment
- Mentoring for new Tribal chiefs of police
- TribalShare list serve available to tribal criminal justice practitioners

In addition to the Crime Data Collection and Reporting video tutorial and an electronic manual for training purposes the project staff is in the process of developing a two (2) day hands-on Crime Data Collection and Reporting training course which will be delivered at ten (10) Tribal locations nationwide. The dates and locations of these course deliveries are not yet determined, however will be marketed nationwide and posted to the project web site well in advance of each training date. This course will be delivered utilizing a blended learning approach that incorporates instructor led classroom lecture in conjunction with hands-on lab applications by use of a mobile computer training lab.

Target Audience

The National Center for Rural Law Enforcement target audience includes Tribal law enforcement personnel and Tribal criminal justice practitioners.

National Congress of American Indians

About NCAI

Founded in 1944, the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) is the nation's oldest, largest, and most representative national Indian organization. NCAI was initially formed as a national body to combat the federal government's detrimental policies of termination and assimilation against Tribes, and to this day, it remains steadfast in its mission to protect and enhance tribal sovereignty. NCAI serves to secure for Indian peoples and their descendants the rights and benefits to which they are entitled; to enlighten the public toward a better understanding of Indian people; to preserve rights under Indian treaties or agreements with the United States; and to promote the common welfare of American Indians and Alaska Natives. It does so by hosting forums to debate and deliberate on pressing political issues and providing Tribes with a platform in the nation's capitol from which their voices can be heard.

The NCAI, largely through its 501(c)(3) affiliate the NCAI Fund, has been working for over 10 years to promote intergovernmental cooperation between states and tribes, first through a State-Tribal Relations Project in partnership with the National Conference of State Legislators, and currently through its Tribal-State Collaboration and Justice Capacity Building Project with the National Criminal Justice Association (NCJA).

Services Provided

NCAI's current Tribal-State Collaboration project with the NCJA aims to increase awareness by tribal and state government officials of the benefits of collaborative problem solving and planning and replicate promising practices for improving public safety in tribal communities through tribal-state collaboration methods. To accomplish this goal, NCAI is assisting NCJA with the development and implementation of a national training and technical assistance program with several training components, including working groups, webinars, pilot trainings, a mentoring program, and educational materials.

Target Audience

NCAI's primary target audience includes tribal leaders and criminal justice stakeholders (e.g., tribal law enforcement officials, tribal judges, tribal prosecutors, victim advocates, etc.).

National Criminal Justice Association

About NCJA

Based in Washington, D.C., the NCJA is a nonprofit membership organization representing state, tribal and local governments on crime prevention and crime control issues. Its members represent all facets of the criminal and juvenile justice community, from law enforcement, corrections, prosecution, defense, courts, victim-witness services and educational institutions to federal, state and local elected officials.

The NCJA is a national voice in shaping and implementing criminal justice policy since its founding in 1971. As the representative of state, tribal and local criminal and juvenile justice practitioners, the NCJA works to promote a balanced approach to communities' complex public safety and criminal and juvenile justice system problems. The NCJA recognizes the importance of interrelationships among criminal and juvenile justice agencies and between these agencies and the community and the strong, steady advocacy necessary to achieve comprehensive planning and policy coordination goals.

Services Provided

This is a joint project of the National Criminal Justice Association (NCJA) and the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI).

Project Goals and Strategies

- Use existing resources and publications developed by NCJA and NCAI as foundation for new training and technical assistance program (TTA) including collaboration toolkit and hundreds of already collected law enforcement service agreements.
- Convene two working groups of tribal and state representatives and criminal justice stakeholders to guide TTA development, needs, and delivery mechanisms.
- Conduct two pilot training programs using a team approach with teams from states lead by the state agency administrator (SAA) and tribal teams within the states lead by elected tribal leaders with justice system stakeholders from each. At least one will be conducted in and with PL-280 states.
- Conduct Webinars and online training session to reach states and tribes unable to participate in the pilot trainings and to disseminate promising practices. May also be used for follow-up to trainings and TA site visits.
- Establish a Mentoring Program for state-to-state and tribe-to-tribe mentoring relationships focused on building tribal-state collaboration efforts in justice areas.
- Collect and disseminate promising practices in tribal-state collaboration and strategic justice planning using the membership organizations of both national organizations and other national organizations of key stakeholders.

Target Audience

The pilot trainings will bring in teams from state government and each tribe in the state for training collaborative work between tribal and state leaders aimed at enhancing collaboration on law enforcement and other criminal justice issues specific to each state's geographic area. At least one training site will be for a PL-280 state and the other site will be selected using geographic diversity, cultural diversity, and PL-280 or section 638 states as a guide to selection. The selection of sites will be done in consultation with BJA, tribes, states, and the NCJA-NCAI project team. The state teams will include the State Agency Administrator (SAA) as lead along with other key stakeholders including local law enforcement, courts, substance abuse treatment providers, and other appropriate justice practitioners. The tribal teams will include tribal leaders and tribal law enforcement, courts, treatment and service providers, and other tribal justice practitioners.

National Indian Justice Center

About NIJC

The National Indian Justice Center is a 100% Indian owned and operated training and technical assistance organization with the primary purpose of improving the administration of justice in Indian Country. NIJC was founded in 1983 and has developed more than 40 training courses for tribal government personnel, is contracted by tribes for tribal court evaluations and provides technical assistance on various issues facing tribal governments.

NIJC has been awarded a grant from BJA to provide in-person training, onsite and web-based technical assistance and mentoring opportunities to tribal justice systems to show them how they can use this promising practice to enhance tribal court operations around substance abuse issues. More specifically, the comprehensive TTA program will encompass

- Recognizing signs and symptoms indicative of substance abuse issues.
- Adaptation of the Juvenile Crime Prevention (JCP) tool into intake forms and data management systems for local use to enhance determination of whether or not substance abuse is a contributing factor in a case, how it contributes to an offender's criminal behavior and if FASD is indicated.
- Targeting interventions that reduce risk factors and enhance protective factors.
- Identify existing diversion and treatment programs.
- FASD training and bench guide.
- Strategies and practices for interagency cooperation when insufficient resources exist at the local level.
- Evaluating program effectiveness for defendants who are diverted.

Additionally, because access to services are such a critical part of successful intervention, NIJC will convene roundtable discussions to explore the challenges tribal justice systems face in creating and/or acquiring prevention and intervention services for participants with substance abuse and FASD issues and strategies for overcoming these barriers.

Services Provided

Services the organization will provide include training and technical assistance for tribal court personnel on issues of court development and improvement; training and technical assistance for tribal leaders to maintain consistency in development of laws and revision of constitutions.

Target Audience

Target audience includes tribal court personnel tribal transportation personnel, tribal leaders, tribal attorneys, state and federal agencies working with tribal governments.

Training Coordinator

The National Tribal Judicial Center at The National Judicial College

About NJC

The National Judicial College sets the benchmark for training judges and began training tribal court judges in 1976. Since its foundation in 2002, the National Tribal Judicial Center (NTJC) at the National Judicial College (NJC) has served as a significant resource for tribal judges and other related court personnel who seek to improve their professional skills and court management practices. It is among the first institutions to address the distinctive needs of American Indian and Alaska Native tribal law practitioners and remains one of the few to do so. Judges, peacemakers, and court personnel from many nations from across Indian Country come to the NTJC to learn with and from each other.

Since 2002, the NTJC has trained more than 3,000 judges and court personnel. It continues to grow and evolve to meet the tribes' emerging needs for judicial education. The NTJC staff collaborates with its advisory council and partner institutions providing training in Indian Country to develop relevant, practical curricula and programs. Faculty members, many of them tribal judges, are nationally recognized experts actively practicing in their fields. The faculty receives extensive training through NTJC/NJC's faculty development program, which teaches best practice methods in adult learning adapted to the distinct learning styles of American Indians and Alaska Natives.

Services Provided

NTJC remains a leader in tribal judicial training with a curriculum that includes such courses as Essential Skills for Tribal Court Judges, Dispute Resolution Techniques for Tribal Justice Systems, Court Management for Tribal Judges and Personnel, Practical Approaches to Family Issues in Tribal Court, Tribal Court Practice and Procedures, and Handling Domestic Violence Cases, just to name a few. Classes feature an interactive learning environment with significant opportunities to exchange information, share ideas and engage in practical discussions to identify solutions for specific problems and many of the courses are designed for teams. We have modified some of our curricula to respond directly to the appeal of cross-training and more team training opportunities to better benefit learners in Indian Country.

During training at our state-of-the-art facility, participants have many opportunities to refine skills and practice new techniques. Additionally, the NTJC has embarked on development of a series of web based courses to reach judges and court personnel who are hampered by minimal travel and training budgets. Judges who take NTJC courses can earn credits toward the National Judicial College's Professional Development Certificate in Tribal Judicial Skills. This innovative program is designed for those who want to concentrate their studies on topics most relevant to judges serving tribal courts.

The NTJC is also committed to continuing the movement to encourage collaborative programs between tribal, state and federal justice systems. There is growing support for promoting tribal-state forums and endorsing mentoring opportunities connecting existing forums to evolving forums. NTJC is dedicated to sustaining the momentum of this progress in government to government relations for the benefit of all people in all communities. NTJC has directly responded to technical assistance requests in this area as well as to request to provide more condensed trainings in the field on such needed topics as new judge training.

NTJC Advisory Council

The NTJC has an advisory council comprised of ten individuals who were selected based on leadership and experience as tribal judges and on historical service in support of tribal programs at The National Judicial College. Other characteristics, such as geographic diversity and scholarship in federal Indian or tribal law, were also considered. Their insight and candor, as well as experience in the adult education field, have resulted in important institutional changes at The National Judicial College that continue to benefit the tribal judges and court personnel who attend courses. Indian Country is also represented by two individuals selected to serve on two advisory bodies of the NJC. The Honorable Denette Mouser, Vice Chief Justice, Supreme Court of the Muscogee (Creek) Nation, joined the NJC Board of Trustees in July 2006. In 2009, The Honorable Elbridge Coochise, faculty member at the NJC since 1993, was elected to the Faculty Council as the Tribal Representative.

Target Audience

The NTJC's target audience continues to be judges, peacemakers and all court related personnel such as court clerks, court administrators, attorneys, lay advocates, probation officers and law enforcement as well as social service providers to tribal communities.

Tribal Law and Policy Institute

About TLPI

The Tribal Law and Policy Institute (TLPI) is a 100% Native American owned and operated corporation which was established in 1996 to design and deliver education, research, training, and technical assistance programs which promote the improvement of justice in Indian Country and the health, well-being and culture of Native peoples. TLPI's vision is to empower Native communities to create and control their own institutions for the benefit/welfare of all community members now and for future generations. TLPI's mission is to enhance and strengthen tribal sovereignty and justice while honoring community values, protecting rights, and promoting well-being. For more information on TLPI's approach and philosophy, visit www.tribal-institute.org/lists/vision.htm

TLPI has established a comprehensive website ("Tribal Court Clearinghouse") in the 1990s which serves as a resource for American Indian and Alaska Native Nations, tribal justice systems, tribal law enforcement, and others involved in the improvement of justice in Indian Country (www.tlpi.org). TLPI also maintains a series of other web-based publications and resources. For access to TLPI's online resource publication library, visit www.tribal-institute.org/lists/pubs.htm

TLPI provides training and technical assistance services under two BJA grant programs. TLPI's Tribal Healing to Wellness Court program includes Tribal Healing to Wellness Court on-site technical assistance, enhancement training, and publications. TLPI's Tribal Court Collaboration Program includes expanded Walking on Common Ground website, Promising Practices resources, Tribal Legal Studies textbooks, and Tribal Legal Code resources.

Tribal Wellness Courts Training and Technical Assistance (T/TA) Services

TLPI provides Training and Technical Assistance (T/TA) services for Tribal Healing to Wellness (Drug) Courts including

- On-Site Technical Assistance for Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts
- Tribal Healing to Wellness Court Enhancement Training
- Tribal Healing to Wellness Court, and publications including
 - Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts: Needs Assessment Report (2010)
 - Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts: Overview of Tribal Drug Courts (revised and updated version available Fall 2011)
 - Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts: The Key Components (revised and updated version available Fall 2011)
 - Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts: Program Policies, Procedures, and Code Provisions (available Fall 2011)
 - Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts: Treatment Guidelines for Adults and Juveniles (available Spring 2012)
 - Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts: The Judges Bench Book (available Spring 2012)

Walking on Common Ground

TLPI is currently transforming the WalkingOnCommonGround.org website into an ongoing permanent comprehensive resource highlighting tribal state collaboration – especially tribal state court collaborations and forums – and providing resources for those who wish to replicate. The site will be searchable by state (and tribe) through various methods including an interactive map.

Promising Practices Publications/Resources

TLPI is in the process of developing both hard copy and online promising practices resources concerning (1) Tribal-State Court collaborations; and (2) Public Law 280 collaborations. Tentative publication date for both publications is Fall 2011.

Tribal Legal Studies Textbooks

TLPI has developed a series of Tribal Legal Studies publication/textbook resources including

- Introduction to Tribal Legal Studies (2nd Edition)
- Tribal Criminal Law and Procedure
- Sharing our Stories of Survival

Instructor Guides are also being developed for all three publications.

Tribal Legal Code Resources

TLPI has developed a series of Tribal Legal Code resource publications /textbook resources including

- Tribal Legal Code Resource: Domestic Violence Laws
- Tribal Legal Code Resource: Sexual Violence and Stalking Laws
- Tribal Legal Code Resource: Crimes Against Children
- Tribal Legal Code Resource: Civil Child Welfare Laws (available summer 2011)

Target Audience

The target audience is American Indian and Alaska Native nations and others interested in promoting the improvement of justice in Indian Country and the health, well-being and culture of Native peoples.

University of North Dakota School of Law

About UND

The University of North Dakota (UND) School of Law established the Tribal Judicial Institute (TJI) in 1993 with an award from a private foundation, to provide training and technical assistance to twenty tribal courts in North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota. The University of North Dakota School of Law is a leader amidst law schools in the advancement of tribal legal studies through established curricula and through the implementation of an Indian Law Certificate Program that is offered to J.D. candidates. Since its inception and with the support of the School of Law, the Institute has expanded to become a national institute and has conducted over 500 local, regional and national training sessions. In 1998, the Institute became one of the initial grantees of the Bureau of Justice Assistance under BJA's Tribal Court Assistance Program (TCAP).

In 2001, the Institute was asked by BJA to coordinate the Tribal Court Assistance Program and since that time has served as the primary technical assistance provider to the over 250 Indian tribes that have received funding under the Tribal Court Assistance Project. The TCAP program was conceived under DOJ's Indian Country Law Enforcement Initiative and its primary focus has been assuring safety for native communities by providing funding to Indian tribes to improve the collaboration between law enforcement and the courts and to assist local tribal initiatives to respond to crime in Indian Country. Under the TCAP program the Institute helped coordinate two "Listening" conferences where tribal leaders in Alaska and the lower 48 were able to come together with federal and state policy makers and express their concerns about crime in their communities. In addition the Tribal Judicial Institute has actively collaborated with several BJA funded agencies to offer training opportunities on indigenous justice programs and methodology.

Services Provided

In addition to trainings, the Institute provides assistance in drafting tribal codes, court assessments, developing protocols between state and tribal governments on child welfare, child support and jurisdictional agreements, tribal court job descriptions, student legal research for tribal judges, and other requests from Indian tribes. The Institute also operates a limited scholarship program for tribes who are unable to afford the travel and lodging associated with attending training events.

Areas of Training and Technical Assistance

The Tribal Judicial Institute offers a wide array of training and technical assistance to BJA grantees and non-BJA grantees.

General Tribal Justice System Areas

- Federal Indian Law
- Tribal law and indigenous justice methodology
- Civil and criminal jurisdiction in Indian Country
- Tribal justice system development and enhancement
- Tribal and diversionary court assessment, planning and implementation
- Tribal code development
- Court administration, funding, budgeting and administration

Topical Justice System Areas

- Law enforcement training
- Clerks' certification training
- Tribal drug courts
- Domestic violence and sexual assault
- Sex offender management
- Child welfare and child support
