PUTTING PROBLEM-SOLVING INTO PRACTICE

Scenario:

The court calendar shows two hearings scheduled in the same courtroom at the same time—one for a child custody case and another for a criminal arraignment. Both attorneys, the parties, and support staff are present and growing frustrated. No one is sure which case has priority.

Questions:

- What is the immediate problem?
- Who needs to be involved in resolving this?
- What are the possible solutions?
- What steps can be taken to avoid this in the future?

Tools and Resources

- Checklists and templates -> keep decisions and processes structured
- Technology aids -> use technology for case tracking, reminders, and task assignments

Continuous improvement builds better courts and outcomes.
